Sarah Tidey brings impressive analytical and communication skills to her Consultant role at Worklogic, specialising in workplace investigations and training programs.

Sarah has a keen understanding of people risk management from her more than fifteen years experience in the legal and financial services field. Starting her career in private practice working in litigation, predominantly for insurance clients, Sarah later worked as a solicitor in the claims department of an international insurer. She there specialised in professional risks, including Directors and Officers' liability and employment practices liability. Accordingly, Sarah appreciates the need for employers to take their duties and liabilities in the workplace seriously.

Internationally, Sarah has spent three years working as a consultant in the Professional Risks Division of an International Broker in Hong Kong. A confident speaker and project manager, Sarah has conducted training workshops and organised conferences on the subject of professional risk.

Prior to joining Worklogic, Sarah worked as a Case Manager for the Financial Ombudsman Service, where she investigated disputes in the financial services sector and assisted the parties to reach a resolution without recourse to litigation.
