Tom Henry brings impressive communication and analytical skills to his role as Consultant with Worklogic, specialising in workplace investigations.

He began his career as a Commercial Lawyer at Blake Dawson, where he learnt the value of clear analytical thinking, concise and powerful communication skills, and effective case management.

Following this, Tom has specialised for a number of years in strategic oversight of legal precedents, working as part of a team responsible for the form, content and strategic direction of a national legal database of documents in a large commercial firm. This further enhanced his knowledge and experience in effective communication and risk management through excellent written communication.

Tom has worked on a number of investigations at Worklogic, and has experience across a variety of sectors.

He has also worked as a professional musician.
